

From the Lonely Hearts Club: Now with Extra Murder

By Don Zolidis

TODD, a men's rights activist, is on a speed date.

TODD

I'm telling you right now. What you're seeing in front of you... is off the market. Too bad, so sad. So why am I doing speed dating if I'm not interested in dating women? Revenge. I'm just showing you what you can't have. I am my own temple. You want this? Too bad. I got my promise ring here. To myself. I will date no woman.

Why? I'll tell you why. Feminism. Women are taking over everything. You know who the most oppressed people are? Men. Oh yeah. Think about all the ways you're oppressing us. I can't strip naked and roll around on the floor like I want to. Can't do it. It would offend you. Animals do it all the time. I got a dog that does it, but not me – nope – can't offend the ladies. Even if I wanted to smear jelly all over me and do it. Oh sure I could do that at home, but that's not as much fun.

And get this – every time I follow a woman home and stand outside her door at night, she gets all upset and calls the police. Like, what is that? Doesn't she know I'm a nice guy and I'm there to rescue her from her life?

So you know what? It's time for the boycott. This man is officially off the market. You ain't getting none of this. So go home and cry.